

Did Neil Armstrong really photograph Buzz Aldrin among ghostly kangaroos on the Moon?

Of course not. The kangaroos are from a photo taken at Honeysuckle Creek by Hamish Lindsay.

Mike Linney combined the two images for a Honeysuckle T-shirt in the 1970s, and the picture on the front page is a modern rendering inspired by that. So, no, it's not real.

But the birth of Jesus Christ in Bethlehem, his preaching of the kingdom of God, his offer of new life, and his death on the cross are every bit as real as any event in history.

And Jesus' resurrection from the dead proves that his is the most important message we can hear. It's good news this Christmas.

Kangaroos and snow at Honeysuckle Creek Tracking Station.

*Jesus says,
'Come to me, all who labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.'* – Matthew 11:28.